Section Two: The Executive's Budget Proposal

Notes on abbreviations:

BY = budget year (year for which the budget proposals are being made)

BY+1 = one year beyond the budget year

BY-1 = one year before the budget year

Note 1: The Open Budget Survey research process was carried out over a 12-month period and the final version of the Open Budget Questionnaires reflect decisions made after multiple rounds of discussions between Survey researchers, peer reviewers, and the International Budget Partnership (IBP) (in several countries these decisions also considered comments received from governments). When peer reviewers or governments agreed with the answers provided by researchers, they often provided no comment. Thus for many questions, the section in the questionnaire that should contain peer reviewer comments is left blank. However, if the government did not provide any comments to a question (because it did not dispute the answer), the section within the questionnaire that is meant to reflect government comments specifies the answer that the government agreed with (by default).

Since the IBP continued its discussions with the researchers even after receiving peer reviewer and government comments, for some questions these discussions resulted in a mutual decision to change the answers, even if the peer reviewers and governments agreed with the original answer provided by the researcher. Such changes may have happened as a result of:

1. A more consistent application of the Survey methodology;
2. New information identified by the researcher or by IBP that had a bearing on the answer for a particular question; or
3. Decisions made to ensure cross-country comparability of answers.

For more information on these changes for any question please write to info@internationalbudget.org.

The Executive's Budget Proposal
Estimates for the Budget Year and Beyond
1. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present expenditures for the budget year that are classified by administrative unit (that is, by ministry, department, or agency)? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. All expenditures are classified by administrative unit. b. Expenditures are classified by administrative unit, but some small units are not shown separately. c. Expenditures are classified by administrative unit, but a significant number of units are not shown separately. d. No expenditures classified by administrative unit are presented. e. Not applicable/other (please comment). Citation: The Anggaran Perbelanjaan Persekutuan 2009 (Estimates of Federal Expenditure for the year 2009), Contents, pages v, 65-658, shows that expenditures are classified by ministry. Comment: Peer Reviewer One Comment: Peer Reviewer Two Comment: Also, expenditures are classified as operational, development and supply. 2. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present expenditures for the budget year that are classified by functional classification?

- a. All expenditures are classified by functional classification, and the categorization is compatible with international standards.
- b. All expenditures are classified by functional classification, but the categorization is not compatible with international standards.
- c. Some, but not all, expenditures are classified by function.
- d. No expenditures classified by function are presented.
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Economic Report 2008/2009, Table 4.5

http://www.treasury.gov.my/pdf/economy/er/0809/jp4_5.pdf

Comment:

Expenditures are somewhat classified according to their purpose such as defense, health, and transport. The Economic Report offers budget allocation for 2009 but this is brief and does not follow international standards.

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: Also, the classification of the Federal Government Operating Expenditures is quite detailed to include emolument, pension, debt service, grants, supplies, services and subsidies. Operating and Development Expenditures are classified as security, social services, economic services, general administration and others.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

3. 4. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present expenditures for individual programs for the budget year?
- Program-level data are presented for all expenditures.
 - Program-level data are presented for at least two-thirds of, but not all, expenditures.
 - Program-level data are presented, but for less than two-thirds of expenditures.
 - No program-level data are presented.
 - Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

Anggaran Perbelanjaan Persekutuan 2009 (Estimates of Federal Expenditure for the year 2009)

Comment:

The document shows programme level detail within various ministries, for both operational and development expenditure

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Program level data is presented, but is sometimes still highly aggregated. For example, for the prime minister's department in 2009, RM 5.0 billion is allocated for the development of 5 corridors. RM 5.0 billion is more than a third of the budget for the prime minister's department, and by itself is 2% of the total budget, but it is covered by just one line item.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." Operational and Development expenditures are classified according to commissions, departments and ministries. However, there is not a details breakdown on the subgroups.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I chose to change my answer from "a" to "b" because as mentioned by PR1, programme level data is presented despite it being aggregated. Whilst PR2 made a good argument for the lack of details in the subgroups breakdown, we believe that information on programme-level data is presented, if not as comprehensive.

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "b" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

5. In the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation, are estimates of the aggregate level of expenditure presented for a multi-year period (at least two years beyond the budget year)? a. Yes, multi-year estimates of aggregate expenditure are presented. b. No, multi-year estimates of aggregate expenditure are not presented. c. Not applicable/other (please comment). Citation: Comment: No multi-year estimates of expenditure are shown beyond budget year 2009 (i.e. expenditure for 2009-2011) but there is a total estimate figure for a 5 year period 2006-2010 - but it is only for development expenditures. This can be found throughout the Anggaran Perbelanjaan Persekutuan 2009 (Estimates of Federal Expenditure for the year 2009), the Ninth Malaysia Plan and the Mid-term review of the Ninth Malaysian Plan. However the latter two documents are not part of the Executive's main budget proposal. Peer Reviewer One Comment: Also, there is no explicit link between the Malaysia Plans which cover 5-year periods and the annual Budgets. Peer Reviewer Two Comment: Also, multi-year estimates of aggregate expenditure are prepared for the executive budget. Data on multi-year expenditures can be found in the economic report, but these are not estimates. Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.	b

Comment:

There is no additional information related to the composition of government debt presented. However, up to date information may be found on the website of the Central Bank of Malaysia (www.bnm.gov.my) under their Monthly Statistical Bulletin: Federal Government Finance but this is not included as part of the Executive's main budget proposal.

a

Researcher Response to this Question was "d"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a." Information given on the debt includes the domestic and external debt which includes countries of the external loan, public sector, private and short term debt. Information on interest rates, maturity date and currency denomination are also provided.

In Economic Report, Table 4.8 provides data on Federal Government Domestic Debt and Table 4.9 provides data on national debt.

For Tables 4.8 and 4.9 the data are for 2008, but this can be approximated for 2009.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "d," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "a" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

14. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present the macroeconomic forecast upon which the budget projections are based?

- a. Yes, an extensive discussion of the macroeconomic forecast is presented, and key assumptions (such as inflation, real GDP growth, unemployment rate, and interest rates) are stated explicitly.
- b. Yes, the macroeconomic forecast is discussed and most of the key assumptions are stated explicitly, but some details are excluded.
- c. Yes, there is some discussion of the macroeconomic forecast (and/or the presentation of key assumptions), but it lacks important details.
- d. No, information related to the macroeconomic forecast is not presented.
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Comment:

Macroeconomic forecasts of real GDP growth for 2009 are available, but important detail. Inflation and interest rate forecasts for 2009 are not provided and the document does not extensively discuss how budget figures relate to macroeconomic forecasts.

C

Researcher Response to this Question was "c"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: For example, the budget does not explicitly state what level of oil prices is assumed. This is important as it affects petroleum-related revenues as well as fuel subsidies (pump prices are set by the government).

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: Also, macroeconomic forecast only available for GDP and GDP growth, not other macroeconomic components.

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Macroeconomic forecasts of real GDP for 2009 are available but lack detail. Inflation and interest rate forecasts for 2009 are not provided and the document does not extensively discuss how budget figures relate to macroeconomic forecast. However, details on macroeconomic forecast are explained in the Annual Economic Report which is released simultaneously with the Budget.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments, IBP editors chose answer "c."

Comment:

As with its previous budget years, policy proposals are highlighted in the budget summary without proceeding to discuss how they affect expenditures.

Researcher Response to this Question was "c"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: For example, Point 11 of the 2009 Budget speech says that RM500m is allocated for increased welfare assistance. However, it is not discernible where the RM500m allocation is reflected in the budget itself. Similar examples can be found in points 16 and 18. Point 11 is reproduced below: The Government empathizes with the difficulties faced by the lower income group, arising from the higher cost of living. In this regard, the Government has raised the eligibility criteria for welfare assistance under the Welfare Department, from a monthly household income of RM400 to RM720 for Peninsular Malaysia, RM830 for Sarawak and RM960 for Sabah. With this increase, the number of eligible recipients is expected to double from 54,000 households to 110,000. This includes an increase in the number of eligible senior citizens from 14,000 to 40,000. For this purpose, an additional RM500 million is allocated.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Policy proposals are highlighted in brief in the budget summary. Some reference to previous years is made where applicable. A more elaborated detail of the policy and its impact on expenditures is shown in the Appendix. Example include: stamp duty exemption on housing loan documents. Information is given on the current situation and the proposed policy. The proposal is to be effective for all hire purchase agreements within the period of 30th August 2008 – 31st December 2010.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "c," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments, IBP editors chose answer "b."

Comment:

- Table 4.4 shows classification by object for 2008 but this is brief and does not follow international standards.
- The document shows expenditures for 2008 related to the Supply Fund only (not Development Fund or other) is somewhat classified according to the nature of expenditure (salary, assets) but these are quite aggregate amounts. The categorisation does not follow IMF's economic classification standard.

Researcher Response to this Question was "c"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." The economic classifications are aggregate data. For example, for the development expenditure include security (defense and internal security), social services (education and training, health, housing, others), economic services (agriculture and rural development, public utilities, trade and industry, transport, communications and others), general administration and other expenditure.

Government Comment: The documents take guidance from IMF's Government Finance Statistics (GFS) Manual and have been modified to suit local circumstances.

Peer Reviewer One Comment: 2006 debt figures reflect actual outcomes.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b" or "c." Under the Estimates for Federal Revenue it's Y-2, but for the economic report, it's Y-5.

Comment:

The Economic Report records grants to state governments but there are no clear breakdown on grants to individual state governments.

The Federal Government's Expenditure Estimate 2009 records transfers to states that have been committed as charged expenditure (annual commitments), again with little detail and no narrative discussion.

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." I agree with the comments given by the researcher, but I believe that the extent of exclusion is such that many important details are lacking, hence "c" is a more appropriate response.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "b," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed as suggested by Peer Reviewer one "c."

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "c" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

Comment:

According to an interview with a member of the Executive (Treasury Ministry at the Ministry of Finance), Malaysia does not have expenditure arrears/overdue debt. Instead, amounts of money are always allocated to cover the amount of debt. The IMF documents (Article IV Consultation Reports) do not contain any information on Malaysia having expenditure arrears.

Researcher Response to this Question was "e"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "d." The budget itself does not contain any explicit statement on expenditure arrears or the absence thereof.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "no access to such information."

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "e," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed as suggested by Peer Reviewer one "d."

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "d" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries. Note that it is important to distinguish between arrears and debt repayment, as they are two distinct concepts. In any case, information on arrears is not presented.

Comment:

Some information is presented, for example: pensions, gratuities, and retirement expenditures. However, only these liabilities are presented and does not have any narrative discussion.

Researcher Response to this Question was "c"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "d." The budget provides information on the amount of pension expenditure expected to be incurred in the forthcoming year. However, there is no information provided on the extent of liabilities extending further into the future.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Information on pension and gratuities are lumped together. Additional information on pension is on the pension and derivative benefit and also pension payments according to program activities.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "c," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Contributions are segregated as foreign governments and local contributions. Information on local contributions is broken down into companies, voluntary organizations, statutory bodies and compensation for services from overseas.

Comment:

Non-financial data are presented for all programmes but they are not directly recorded to correlate with the amounts of expenditures for which they represent. Under each ministry, non-financial data are always presented first. This is followed by the breakdown of accounts. For instance, a list of programmes would be listed, accompanied by the number of staff employed under each programme. Outputs such as number of bills/invoice/vouchers processed (e.g. page 53, programme 1: Electoral matters, Activity 1: Management), number of courses carried out (e.g.: page 414, Programme 2: Tourism, Activity 7: Human Resources) are also included, subject to ministry's programme and activity. However, the document does not show the expenditure for which the staff is being paid.

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." The researcher correctly comments that the inputs employed for particular programmes are listed. However, the outputs are not always presented e.g. it is not stated who were the beneficiaries of a particular programme.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response to this Question was "e"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "d." Information on conditions associated with donor country assistance is not presented. In fact, total amounts are not officially tabulated, nor publicly presented, to begin with. An instance of reported aid is 473 million yen from Japan to Malaysia for the improvement of equipment for maritime security enhancement in Malaysian territorial waters. This was reported in January 2008, Source: <http://www.encyclopedia.com/doc/1P2-15193974.html>. In March 2009, another report said 992m yen was granted. Source: <http://www.encyclopedia.com/doc/1G1-196672586.html>. In both cases, no information on conditions, if any, was presented.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "d." No information on conditions associated with donor country assistance is provided.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "e," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed as suggested by Peer Reviewer one and two as "d."

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "d" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

Comment:

The Budget Speech and its Appendix is a summary of the budget, focusing on new proposals for year 2009. However, the information provided in the summary does not include the objectives and assumptions for a particular proposal being raised.

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." The Budget speech is accepted as the summary of the budget proposals. However, it is difficult, if not impossible, to reconcile aspects of the budget speech with the budget and its proposals. For example, Point 11 of the 2009 Budget speech says RM500m is allocated for increased welfare assistance. However, it is not discernible where the RM500m allocation is reflected in the budget itself. Similar examples can be found in points 16 and 18. Point 11 is reproduced below:

11. The Government empathizes with the difficulties faced by the lower income group, arising from the higher cost of living. In this regard, the Government has raised the eligibility criteria for welfare assistance under the Welfare Department, from a monthly household income of RM400 to RM720 for Peninsular Malaysia, RM830 for Sarawak and RM960 for Sabah. With this increase, the number of eligible recipients is expected to double from 54,000 households to 110,000. This includes an increase in the number of eligible senior citizens from 14,000 to 40,000. For this purpose, an additional RM500 million is allocated.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "b," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed as suggested by Peer Reviewer one to "c."

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "c" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

 - Yes, the right has been codified into law, but it is frequently or always impossible in practice to obtain access to government information, including budget information.

Comment:

Currently, there is no right in law to access all types of information such as a Right to Information Act or a Freedom of Information Act. Such public information includes budget information. However, most budget information and documents are available to the public from Treasury on request to the ministry, or by gaining access in their library.

There is also the Official Secrets Act which restricts information to the public based on government's discretion.

On 19th May 2009, the state of Selangor announced its intentions of wanting to enact the Freedom of Information bill and it is scheduled to be tabled in the Selangor State Assembly in March 2010. However, there are no evidence of tabling, let alone approving, the Freedom of Information at the Parliament level in the near future.

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: Currently the right in law to access government information, including budget information has not been codified into law. Nevertheless, except those information defined as "official secret" under section 2 of the Official Secrets Act 1972 [Act 88], most of the government information and documents are available to the public either in the form of books, journals or via websites.

The current approach practiced in Malaysia pertaining to financial budget proposal involves consultation with selected members of the public, organizations and other private sectors. Only after such consultation the proposed budget will be drafted, tabled and debated in Parliament for approval. The budget proposal is available to the public when it is first presented in Parliament. Members of the House of Representatives, being elected members of Parliament has more than a month to debate on the proposed budget.

64. Are citizens able in practice to obtain financial information on expenditures for individual programs in a format that is more highly disaggregated than that which appears in the executive's budget proposal if they request it (for example, from a ministry or agency)?

- b. In practice, highly disaggregated information is available to the public for programs representing at least two-thirds of, but not all, expenditures.

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a." Disaggregated non confidential data are available to the public provided if asked from related ministry/agency.

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Generally, any financial information which is not classified as confidential can be obtained and ministries should be able to provide such information upon request. The Treasury and other government departments do make efforts to put up more detailed financial information and regular updates on its web sites for the benefits of the viewer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire "d."

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "d" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

As Q64, non-financial information is not as easily obtained in practice, however this varies from ministry to ministry. Answers received from this research differed from no response to vague to being requested to put forward a formal communication to the director of the specific programme of the information required.

An example of a vague response would be that such information is not to be released to the public (or the information is only provided internally).

A technique (tactic?) often used is that they would forward the question to another person, who would then either say they will get back to you or let you know when to contact them, only for them not being around to answer. However, there was one instance where CPPS inquired the amount of rice being produced according to state (which can be construed as either non-controversial subject or not, depending on the angle); the officer from the Ministry of Agriculture was very helpful and provided with the answers. I suppose it is rather dependent on what kind of information is requested, often they would ask what is the purpose of the information, why is such information needed etc.

Comment:

The public is informed about the Budget formulation processes by the timetable provided on the Treasury website; however it only provides a general overview of the timeline.

Peer Reviewer One Comment: The timetable, as cited, is very general. It was last updated on 28 July 2008 and sets out only very broad milestones – e.g. March: Submission received from (government) agencies. April: Preliminary Hearing. May – July Budget Hearing.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A diagram of timeline based on months of the budget formulation process is made available to the public at the treasury website. The timeline provides basic information on the month dateline for government agencies to plan activities to meet the dateline of the budget requirement.

Comment:

The executive has an internal timetable for budget preparation and release as a guideline, and adheres to most of the key dates such as preliminary hearings for agencies, printing of the budget documents, and tabling of the budget.

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: This is a difficult question to answer, because the executive does not publicize specific key dates in the first place (see comment to Q 67). However, given that the final Budget document has always been printed and submitted on schedule, one might give the executive the benefit of the doubt and conclude that "b" is appropriate. On the other hand, if one were skeptical, one could suggest that "c" might be the real answer, with the Budget coming out on schedule only due to strenuous last minute efforts and extensive overtime work.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire "b." I chose my answer because although Peer Reviewer One made a compelling point on the executive having difficulty adhering to most of the dates in its timetable, potentially due to strenuous last minute efforts and extensive overtime work, the budget documents are always printed and submitted on schedule, therefore using that as a parameter, deadlines are often met despite clocking extra efforts to meet such deadlines.

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "b" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

Comment:

There is a budget consultation exercise held by the executive with civil society, the corporate sector, and other stakeholders. During the consultation, there will be opportunity for the audience to state their case and provide submissions but only some are selected. The session provides an opportunity for the public to share their views, but the extent to which these views influences budget formulation is unknown.

Examples of such stakeholders include NGOs (volunteer relief organisations, women's group), think tanks, R&D institutes, and organisations in the corporate sector.

The 2010 Budget Consultation meeting was held on 11th June 2009, with the Minister of Finance (also the Prime Minister) being present.

Another method of determining budget priorities include extending circular invites of submitting a Memorandum of Budget Consultation for the coming budget year. Themes would be proposed or recommended by the Ministry of Finance.

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question could be "c." This is a difficult question, within the Malaysian context. The executive does consult with a range of constituencies. But, as the researcher comments, "only some are selected" and "the extent to which these views influences budget formulation is unknown." I have had personal experience attending a consultation, in 2002 or 2003, as part of the Association of Stockbrokers in Malaysia. It was a stilted affair – attendees were guarded in their language, not surprisingly since their businesses are contingent on licenses which are under the government's purview. So, although a range of constituencies is indeed "consulted," the actual amount of constructive discussion is limited.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." As far as I know only the annual consultations involving the mentioning parties as explained in question 70 exist. Apart from that, there is

Federal Constitution of Malaysia, Article 102.

Parliament shall have power in respect of any financial year:

(a) before the passing of the Supply Bill, to authorize by law expenditure for part of the year;

(b) to authorize by law expenditure for the whole or part of the year otherwise than in accordance with Articles 99 to 101, if owing to the magnitude or indefinite character of any service or to circumstances of unusual urgency if appears to Parliament to be desirable to do so.

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: In response to the comments by the researcher, yes, the "a" response is correct. In law, the legislature has unlimited authority. Practice is, of course, a different matter.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." The law states that Parliament has the power to allow additional or reduction in expenditure for activities that are accounted for in the budget. But, the additional expenses have to be tabled in the House of Representative and be included in the Bill (Article 101). The limitation in this sense includes the tabling of the additional expenditure at the House of Representative (Parliament).

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed as suggested by Peer Reviewer two "b."

Comment:

In-year reports released by Central Bank Malaysia compare year-to-date expenditure, but not with original estimates for that period - only aggregate amounts for the same period in prior years. However this is a different classification from that in the budget proposal.

Researcher Response to this Question was "c"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "d." This is because the Monthly Statistical Bulletin is not meant as a budgetary control tool. See also comments for No 83.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." What is presented is comparison of the total expenditure with the previous four years. But no comparison with the original estimates based on the enacted budget. Again, this information is on total expenditure and no break-down is provided.

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a."

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "c." Even if the Monthly Statistical Bulletin is not intended for budgetary control, it appears to contain some of the relevant information.

Comment:

The Central Bank covers with some detail the Federal Government Revenues in Table 6.2; however these quarterly figures are preliminary and lack details.

The Treasury also includes some brief comments on revenue in their Quarterly Economic Report.

b

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Total revenue is reported. The total revenue is still based on the main categories of direct taxes, indirect taxes, non tax revenue and non revenue receipts. The breakdown of each is not as detailed as shown in the executive's budget (estimates of federal government revenue), but covers the important totals of each category of taxes. For example, for direct taxes, the total revenues are given segregated as individual income tax, companies' income tax, petroleum income tax, stamp duties and others.

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a."

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments, IBP editors chose answer "b."

Both the Monthly Statistical Bulletin and the Quarterly Update compare year-to-date revenue collections with the same period in the previous year, but not with the original estimates. Table 6.2 in the Monthly Statistical Bulletin only shows preliminary figures, not actual figures.

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: Information for the same period last year is presented, but no comparisons are made with the enacted budget.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Comparisons are made with previous years. No reference is made to the initial estimate as per the executive's report (the estimates of federal government revenue).

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a."

90. Do in-year reports released to the public on actual borrowing present information related to the composition of government debt (such as interest rates on the debt, maturity profile of the debt, and currency denomination of the debt) for the budget year?

 - Yes, key additional information is presented, but some details are excluded.

Comment:

Tables 6.5-6.7 show debt classification by original maturity, by holder, and by currency and remaining maturity. Some details such as interest rates on debt are excluded in these in-year reports. However, these figures are preliminary not actual, and is up to the second quarter 2009.

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." Important details such as the currency rates use to convert foreign currency debt amounts into ringgit equivalents are not given. Also, the data provided is snapshots at particular points in time. Flow data – the amounts the government repaid and raised and the interest rates thereon – are not provided. Also, the reports cover only direct federal government debt, and do not encompass debts raised by statutory bodies with implicit or explicit government guarantees. Examples of such statutory bodies are Port Klang Free Zone (PKFZ).

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Quarterly reports are more comprehensive in reporting the borrowing information than the Estimates of Federal Government Revenue. Such details are debt in foreign currency and maturity date. But information on interest rates is excluded.

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a." Only interest rates information is not disclosed in the report.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire "b."

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "b" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

- Yes, the executive seeks approval from the legislature before shifting funds between administrative units.
 - Yes, the executive gives prior notification to the legislature before shifting funds, giving the legislature an opportunity to block or modify the proposed adjustment.
 - Yes, the executive seeks legislative approval, but only after the shift of funds has been implemented.

Financial Procedure Act 1957 (Act 61)

Comment:

According to the Financial Procedure Act 1957, Section 15, the money assigned to a purpose of expenditure as approved by the Supply Act cannot be shifted/changed. Therefore the Executive cannot shift funds between administrative units, but the Treasury may approve the shift of funds within ministries, provided that the amount originally appropriated under this purpose or unit is not exceeded.

Researcher Response to this Question was "e"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "d." In practice, because there is no process for scrutinizing budgeted against actual expenditure, there is no substantial impediment to the executive shifting funds at its discretion.

Comment:

Transparency remains a big issue in Malaysia. In practice, privatisation programmes and Government procurement are conducted through nontransparent processes, with only notifications of tenders made public. Criteria for selection and the processes involved are often secretive and "this crucial process remains a great mystery to the public at large because it is shrouded in secrecy. The mystery is heightened by the Official Secrets Act (OSA)."

(<http://www.malaysianinsider.com/index.php/opinion/tunku-aziz/31144-procurement-a-call-for-transparency>)

During the tabling of the stimulus package in 2008

(<http://thestar.com.my/news/story.asp?file=/2008/11/5/nation/2458897&sec=nation>), Prime Minister alludes that open tender system are to be adopted. "However, the Government will still have the discretion to determine if there will be direct negotiations. This exemption on policy will only be made under certain conditions," Therefore it would still be difficult to gauge on whether tenders and licenses are awarded in a transparent manner.

Such scandals include the Port Klang Free Zone scandal (see citation), where huge infrastructure development projects are awarded to selected business entities without going through open and competitive procurement process.

Comment:

There is a wide range of extra-budgetary funds. Pension and social security funds are examples of statutory bodies in Malaysia and they produce their own reports and accounts. As such, they are not included in this document. The Auditor-General also audits these accounts, but they are all in reports separate to the year-end report.

114. Must a branch of government other than the executive (such as the legislature or the judiciary) give final consent before the head of the Supreme Audit Institution (SAI) can be removed from office?

- a. Yes, the head of the SAI may only be removed by the legislature or judiciary, or the legislature or judiciary must give final consent before they are removed.
- b. No, the executive may remove the head of the SAI without the final consent of the judiciary or legislature.
- c. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

Federal Constitution of Malaysia, Article 105-107

Comment:

According to the Federal Constitution, the head of the SAI (Auditor-General) is appointed by the King on the advice of the Prime Minister (PM) and the Conference of Rulers (Sultans/state royalty) and his removal from office follows the same procedure as that of a Judge in the Supreme Court (Article 125(3)).

If the PM shows to the King that the Auditor-General should be removed from office for whatever valid reason as stated in the Constitution, the King will then appoint a tribunal and refer the case to them, and may, on the recommendation of the tribunal, remove the Auditor-General from office. The tribunal should be made up of at least 5 persons who are holding or have held position as judge in the Supreme or High Court. The head of SAI may only be removed on final consent of the King, but it is based on the recommendation of the PM and the tribunal (members of judiciary).

It should be noted that the Tribunal is selected by the Head of State.
