9. News conference is held to discuss release	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes	Yes

*A budget summary should be a stand-alone document, which could include a budget speech or a separately published executive summary.

⁺Mark "Yes" if access by mail order or by Internet, if Internet service is readily available outside the capital and/or big cities.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: Whilst it is true that there are free documents available, these are usually only distributed to parliamentarians and the media. As civil society organizations we almost always purchase copies from the local Revenue Service office as this is the quickest way to have documents available in hard copy.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: Whilst it is true that documents are available for the year-end report, audit report and mid-year review and available for free, I would question if there is a mass distribution of these.

Section Two: The Executive's Budget Proposal

Notes on abbreviations:

BY = budget year (year for which the budget proposals are being made)

BY+1 = one year beyond the budget year

BY-1 = one year before the budget year

Note 1: The Open Budget Survey research process was carried out over a 12-month period and the final version of the Open Budget Questionnaires reflect decisions made after multiple rounds of discussions between Survey researchers, peer reviewers, and the International Budget Partnership (IBP) (in several countries these decisions also considered comments received from governments). When peer reviewers or governments agreed with the answers provided by researchers, they often provided no comment. Thus for many questions, the section in the questionnaire that should contain peer reviewer comments is left blank. However, if the government did not provide any comments to a question (because it did not dispute the answer), the section within the questionnaire that is meant to reflect government comments specifies the answer that the government agreed with (by default).

Since the IBP continued its discussions with the researchers even after receiving peer reviewer and government comments, for some questions these discussions resulted in a mutual decision to change the answers, even if the peer reviewers and governments agreed with the original answer provided by the researcher. Such changes may have happened as a result of:

1. A more consistent application of the Survey methodology;
2. New information identified by the researcher or by IBP that had a bearing on the answer for a particular question; or
3. Decisions made to ensure cross-country comparability of answers.

For more information on these changes for any question please write to info@internationalbudget.org.

Government Comment: The Budget Review (2010) provides robust macroeconomic analysis and forward estimates on revenue and debt service obligations; to ensure fiscal sustainability. Long term projections and sensitivity analysis are made in relation to the proportion of debt to GDP, and risks are identified, for example. This exercise informs decisions to borrow and also places South Africa in a position to come up with sustainable budget.

Comment:

The bulk of public corporations fall under Vote 30: Public Enterprises and Page 697 of the budget document titled, "2009 Estimates of National Expenditure" presents a selection of transfer payments made to certain public corporations. This can be seen online at:
<http://www.treasury.gov.za/documents/national%20budget/2009/ene/30%20public.pdf>

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." My main concern is that such transfers are often not classified clearly as capital or current spending. In fact, due to no fault of public corporations, one cannot see in their summarized financial statements – often presented in the "Estimates of Expenditure" – what tax funds have been used for. This is an accounting challenge, but government in my opinion is not tackling the usage of resources carefully. One more thing – It is true that the biggest public enterprises fall under the Public Enterprise budget vote, but there are other entities for which reporting is not captured. An example was the exclusion of budget information for the "National Empowerment Fund" – an agency meant to support entrepreneurial activity.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "a." I chose my answer because in the main, transfers to public corporations are reported in the budget documentation and detailed motivations made for major capital projects of public corporations. If you look at Page 766 of the budget document titled, "2009 Estimates of National Expenditure," you will see that outlays for capital as well as current expenditures for the National Empowerment Fund are captured.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments and documents, IBP editors chose answer "a."

38. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present information for at least the budget year on quasi-fiscal activities?

- a. Yes, extensive information on quasi-fiscal activities is presented, including both a narrative discussion and, where possible, quantitative estimates.
- b. Yes, information is presented, highlighting key quasi-fiscal activities, but some details are excluded.
- c. Yes, some information is presented, but it lacks important details.
- d. No, information on quasi-fiscal activities is not presented.
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

All quasi-fiscal activities are included in the main budget or in the budgets of the relevant extra-budgetary agencies.

Comment:

Good examples are the strategic projects like the investment in Broadband Infracore and the Pebble Bed Modular Reactor cited on page 697 of the budget document titled, "2009 Estimates of National Expenditure" under Public Enterprises. This can be seen online at: <http://www.treasury.gov.za/documents/national%20budget/2009/ene/30%20public.pdf>

Researcher Response to this Question was "e"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." It is true that government's performance in some areas that could be classified as "quasi-fiscal" is transparent and well captured. An example of this would be the partnership government has with the "Business Trust" to support the Tourism Enterprise Programme. However, in the case of the Pebble Bed Modular Reactor details on exact costs and in particular the contribution of venture capital by partners in developing the prototype is at best opaque, with little details in the public domain. Similarly, offsets from the controversial arms deal, and other areas, are not given enough detail through a transparent disclosure."

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "e," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed as suggested by Peer Reviewer two to "c." I chose my answer because the citation and comment above seem to support the idea that there is some information provided.

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer "c" to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.

39. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present information on financial assets held by the government?
- Yes, extensive information on financial assets is presented, including a listing of the assets, a discussion of their purpose, and an estimate of their market value.
 - Yes, information is presented, highlighting key information, but some details are excluded.
 - Yes, some information is presented, but it lacks important details.
 - No, information on financial assets is not presented.
 - Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

A narrative and financial description of financial assets held by government is presented in Chapter 5 (Asset and Liability Management), pages 71-86 of the budget document titled, "2009 Budget Review."

Comment:

Answer is "a" because this information is available online at: <http://www.treasury.gov.za/documents/national%20budget/2009/review/chap5.pdf>

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response is "b." Chapter 5 largely details financial liabilities. Only a small narrative section is dedicated towards speaking about financial assets. The quantification of available financial assets is also omitted from this section.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." Personally, I have never seen a complete audit of government assets, financial or otherwise that has been completely to my satisfaction. For instance, government still does not have an updated and comprehensive asset register for land that it owns. Moreover, the asset and liability section of the Budget Review does not in my opinion provide a narrative or financial description of "financial assets."

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed as suggested by Peer Reviewer one to "b." I chose my answer because the question restricts itself to financial assets and governments have not been known to divulge details of their asset holdings in non public entities.

IBP Comment: Per OBI methodology, IBP editors chose answer "b."

40. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present information on non-financial assets held by the government?
- Yes, extensive information on non-financial assets is presented, including a listing of the assets, and (where possible) an estimate of their market value.
 - Yes, information is presented, highlighting key information, but some details are excluded.
 - Yes, some information is presented, but it lacks important details.
 - No, information on non-financial assets is not presented.
 - Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

The answer is "b" because information on non-financial assets is presented as disclosure notes in the financial statements of all national and provincial departments, as these departments prepare financial statements on the adjusted cash basis. The information is only disclosed as part of the financials. The financial statements of extra-budgetary institutions are compiled on the Accruals Basis of Accounting and therefore include full details of all non-financial assets held by such institutions.

Comment:

An explanatory memorandum on the structure of government account is captured on Annexure W2 of the budget document titled, "2009 Budget Review." It is available online at:
<http://www.treasury.gov.za/documents/national%20budget/2009/review/Annexure%20W2.pdf>

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "d." Although what the respondent stated is correct (i.e. in the financial statements of departments, the extent of their non-financial asset holdings is indicated, although a detailed breakdown per category is usually only to be found in their asset registers, which is not publicly available), the question wants to know whether this information is contained in the executive budget or any of the supporting budgetary documents, which it is not.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "b," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "b." I chose my answer because part of the documentation entered as supporting budgetary documentation are the departmental annual reports and as such, to the extent to which this information is contained in the annual reports, it is presented with budget documentation. Peer Reviewer One seems to argue that this information is not as detailed as in their asset register, to which I agree, and that some details are excluded. This also has to be considered within the whole of government accounting systems and the checks and balances that include both internal and external audits. Those performing audits form an opinion based on their analysis of documents, like the asset

registers of government departments. IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer “d” to maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries.
41. Does the executive’s budget or any supporting budget documentation present information for at least the budget year on expenditure arrears? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. Yes, extensive information on expenditure arrears is presented, including both a narrative discussion and quantitative estimates. b. Yes, information is presented, highlighting key contingent liabilities, but some details are excluded. c. Yes, some information is presented, but it lacks important details. d. Not applicable/other (please comment). Citation: Table 9, Financial Guarantees: Amounts Drawn on Government Guarantees is presented on Annexure B: Statistical Tables in the budget document titled, “2009 Budget Review.” A narrative description of the basis for recording these liabilities is presented on pages 83 -84, Chapter 5 of the same document. Comment: This information can be found online at: http://www.treasury.gov.za/documents/national%20budget/2009/review/annex%20b.pdf and http://www.treasury.gov.za/documents/national%20budget/2009/review/chap5.pdf Peer Reviewer One Comment: Peer Reviewer Two Comment: Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher’s answer.	a

43. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present information on future liabilities, such as civil service pensions?
- a. Yes, extensive information on future liabilities is presented, including both a narrative discussion and quantitative estimates.
 - b. Yes, information is presented, highlighting key future liabilities, but some details are excluded.
 - c. Yes, some information is presented, but it lacks important details.
 - d. No, information on future liabilities is not presented.
 - e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

The National Treasury has a risk management guideline as articulated on page 83 of the "2009 Budget Review" and as such has made provisions and estimated the likelihood that contingent liabilities may fall due and payable based on actuarial assessments of for instance the Government Employees pension Fund.

Comment:

This information can be found online at:
<http://www.treasury.gov.za/documents/national%20budget/2009/review/chap5.pdf>

b

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Whilst the Budget Review (2009) includes a narrative section (as inferred above), the quantitative estimates of future liabilities, however, only refers to historical information (i.e. 2005/'06 – 2007/'08). Therefore the quantitative amounts of future contingent liabilities are not indicated. The risk management guideline referred to above is also not publicly available.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed as suggested by Peer Reviewer One to "b." I chose my initial answer because the risk management guideline stipulates that actuarial estimates should be used to estimate the likelihood that a future liability may fall due and payable. This is a technical exercise conducted by professional actuaries; in the absence of evidence that government cover for liabilities is below actuarial provisions, one is bound to assume that these are followed to the letter.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments, IBP editors chose answer "b."

44. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation provide details on the sources of donor assistance, both financial and in-kind?

- a. All sources of donor assistance are identified individually.
- b. At least two-thirds of, but not all, sources of donor assistance, are identified individually.
- c. Less than two-thirds of sources of donor assistance are identified individually.
- d. No sources of donor assistance are identified individually.
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

No sources of donor assistance are identified individually in the Executive's Budget Proposal. However, the relevant departmental annual report provides details of all sources of donor assistance, both financial and in-kind. An example is the annual report of the Department of Health; Vote 16 for 2007/08 which can be found online at: <http://www.doh.gov.za/docs/reports-f.html>

Comment:

Further, all ODA both cash/ grants and in-kind assistance reflected in international agreements entered into between South Africa and each of its development partners are reported on the Development Co-operation Information System found online at: <http://www.dcis.gov.za/>

Researcher Response to this Question was "d"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response is "b." At the end of each vote in the Estimates of National Expenditure (2009), there is a summary of all donor funding received by the respective votes (e.g. Vote 10, p202). There is no indication of in-kind assistance received.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Each departmental budget has a section in the Estimates of Expenditure that provides sources of donor funding. An example of this can be seen in the Public Service Budget Vote on pages 184-187 of the 2009 Estimates of Expenditure.

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Names of the Donors are provided in the ENE for every donor funded project, both financial and in-kind.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed to "b." I chose my answer because some sources of donor funding are identified individually and captured in the relevant section of the Estimates of National Expenditure depending on whether they have been notified. Table 26.E Summary of donor funding on page 616 of the budget documentation titled "2009 Estimates of National Expenditure" is a good example. A more complete picture of donor expenditure can be seen in the Departmental Annual Reports as stated in the citation above.

IBP Comment: Per OBI methodology, IBP editors chose answer "b."

45. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present information for at least the budget year on tax expenditures?
- a. Yes, extensive information on tax expenditures is presented, including both a narrative discussion and quantitative estimates.
 - b. Yes, information is presented, highlighting key tax expenditures, but some details are excluded.
 - c. Yes, some information is presented, but it lacks important details.
 - d. No, information on tax expenditures is not presented.
 - e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

Information on tax expenditures is captured in Annexure C: Summary of Additional Tax Proposals for 2009/10 of the budget document titled, "2009 Budget Review" on pages 175 - 186. Except in the case of taxes on personal income, tax expenditures are not quantified e.g. special provisions for business.

Comment:

This information is available online at:

The "2009 budget Review" also presents a "before" and "after" tax proposals revenue estimates for the key tax expenditures which tends to support this citation. See also Annexure B: Statistical tables found online at:

50. Does the executive's budget or any supporting budget documentation present non-financial data, such as the number of beneficiaries, for expenditure programs?
- Non-financial data are presented for all programs.
 - Non-financial data are presented for programs representing at least two-thirds of, but not all, expenditures.
 - Non-financial data are presented for programs representing less than two-thirds of expenditure.
 - No non-financial data are presented.

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." For social programmes (e.g grants) extensive information is available, but non-financial information on economic programmes (e.g. small business support) is patchy. This is not a Treasury problem, but a problem for departments implementing economic programmes.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "a." I chose my answer because each budget Vote in the budget document titled, "2009 Estimates of National Expenditure" has a section titled Selected performance and operations indicators where the numbers of beneficiaries or number of units delivered is captured depending on each case. I am not required to form an opinion as to the quality of non-financial data presented and the purpose for which it could be used.

IBP Comment: Per OBI methodology, IBP editors chose answer "a."

51. Are the non-financial data presented useful for assessing how an expenditure program is performing?
- The non-financial data are very useful for assessing program performance.
 - The non-financial data are mostly useful for assessing program performance.
 - The non-financial data are somewhat useful for assessing program performance.
 - No non-financial data are provided or they are not useful for assessing program performance.
 - Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

Comment:

There is commitment to improve on the quality and scope of this information. The National Treasury even commissioned a Fiscal Incidence Study for Social Spending in South Africa, 2006 which could be found online at:

b

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." The evidence suggests not all non-financial data is useful yet in measuring programme performance.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Again good for social programmes – and lots of independent analysis – but still not adequate for economic programmes.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed to "b." I chose my answer because the quality and usefulness of non-financial data is doubtful in a number of cases and as such cannot be relied upon for basic monitoring and evaluation of public programmes. Take for instance the Department of Health performance indicators on page 275 of the budget documentation titled, "2009 Estimates of National Expenditure," the number of beneficiaries by expenditure category or income group is not given yet a means test is applied when admitting patients to public facilities. This information could be useful in inferring on the expenditure incidence of public programmes and how they could be structured to address the needs of the poorest in the population.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments and documents, IBP editors chose answer "b."

52. Does the executive’s budget or any supporting budget documentation contain performance indicators for expenditure programs? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." Only selected indicators are reported on in the Estimates of National Expenditure (2009). Some of these indicators are also not properly formulated, especially in relation to meeting certain quality standards.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." There are some really poorly developed indicators. For instance, the Science and Technology department has an objective to support small business development in the ICT sector, but the indicators have no targets and are not measurable. Similarly, programmes such as those involved with supporting cooperatives, adult literacy and local economic development often have poorly designed indicators.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed to "b." I chose my answer because I agree with both peer reviewers that some indicators are not captured for programmes and sub-programmes. The absence of a monitoring and evaluation culture within the South African space means that until recently, not enough attention has been given to designing quality performance indicators that could assist one to form an opinion about budget outcomes and progress in attaining policy goals. During a meeting with Treasury officials on the 19th February, 2010, it was confirmed that a Handbook is being produced by the National Treasury in an attempt to devolve quality Programme performance capacity that links outputs to outcomes.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments and documents, IBP editors chose answer "b."

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a." The Budget Review (2009) outlines conditions associated with all borrowing requirements. The Review further disaggregates sources from which Treasury/Government will finance borrowing requirement, and carefully states the implications thereof (currency fluctuations and cash balance). To finance the Budget, the Government borrows both from the local markets (through issuing bonds/bills) and also from multilateral institutions such as the World Bank and the African Development Bank. As stated in the Budget Review (2009, p80), "Owing to the strength of South Africa's capital market, most of the borrowing requirement can be financed domestically." This implies less reliance on international financial institutions, which ultimately eases the conditionality whenever South Africa has to borrow from such institutions.

IBP Comment: Per OBI methodology, IBP editors chose answer "d."

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." The Citizens Budget sets out the main expenditure and revenue sources, and some highlights, but nothing more than that. It could be written in a much more accessible format.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "a." I chose my answer because although the document can be made more user friendly and accessible with more graphical, object or pictorial caption, it is still very informative to those who have an interest and can read it.

Section Three: The Budget Process

The Budget Process
Executive's Formulation of the Budget
66. How far in advance of the release of the budget is the day of its release known? <ol style="list-style-type: none"> The release date is set in permanent law. Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." There are of course consultations, but they are very limited in my opinion. For instance, not even large coalitions like the People's Budget Campaign are consulted during the development of budgets. Similarly, social dialogue forums like NEDLAC (a statutory body which brings together government, labour, community and business) are consulted before the budget is tabled.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire "a." I chose my answer because spaces for engagement are there and have been institutionalized and opened for everyone to participate. In addition to NEDLAC, which has civil society representation, there is the Finance and Fiscal Committee, a statutory committee of parliament that provides independent technical input on revenue sharing and lists civil society as one of its key stakeholders.

IBP Comment: To maintain the consistency of the assumptions used in selecting answers across the countries, IBP editors chose answer "b."

77. Does a legislative committee (or committees) hold public hearings on the individual budgets of central government administrative units (that is, ministries, departments, and agencies) in which testimony from the public is heard?

- a. Yes, extensive public hearings are held on the budgets of administrative units in which testimony from the public is heard.
- b. Yes, hearings are held, covering key administrative units, in which testimony from the public is heard.
- c. Yes, a limited number of hearings are held in which testimony from the public is heard.

- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

Members of the public do provide testimony in some cases; however, this is left to the discretion of the legislative committee. Separate committees report to the National Assembly of Parliament on departmental budgets. These reports are adopted by the House and then referred to the relevant Ministry or Department. Each individual Budget Vote is decided on by the National Assembly when the Appropriation Bill is passed, after direct questions have been posed to the relevant line Ministers.

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a." The Joint Standing Committee on Intelligence is given all information for the budget year on the spending of all secret items. The Committee is privy to all the necessary information. There is secrecy in relation to the information reaching the public, however there is no basis to assuming that some information is not made available to the Committee. All the information is made available to the Committee and cannot be disclosed to researchers.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed to "a." I chose my answer because after discussing the level of information access by the Joint Standing Committee on Intelligence with Ms Ntombi Mbuqe, a Liaison Officer responsible for this committee in Parliament and Mr. Theo Coetzee, the oppositions representative in the Committee (Democratic Alliance), I formed the view that the committee was being given extensive information on all spending on secret items.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments, IBP editors chose answer "a."

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." Actual expenditure information is documented in the monthly expenditure reports per vote only and not by programme.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's original answer "a," which the IBP modified for consistency purposes.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed to "b." I chose my answer because there is some programme-level detail with respect to grant transfers by national departments to the provinces on a quarterly basis.

The Adjustments Appropriation Bill is tabled at the same time as the MTBPS is tabled in parliament, and through it, parliament's approval and adoption of the revised spending plans for the current financial year. In terms of Section 30(2) of the Public Finance Management Act, (Act No 1 of 1999) (PFMA), expenditure provided for in the Adjustments Appropriation Bill includes, among other line items, the money to be appropriated for expenditure already announced by the Minister during the tabling of the annual budget, and the shifting of funds between and within votes or to follow the transfer of functions, in terms of the Section 42 of the PFMA.

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." The overall changes are carefully explained, but details for instance on projected tax overruns in the four months leading to budget day are not projected into the estimates. This creates space for politicians to claim that "additional revenue" is available.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "a." I chose my answer because as much as I do understand Peer Reviewer Two's concern, the information is provided in the budget documentation and surges during different periods of the revenue cycle. It explains projected tax overruns, especially once the tax year has been finalized. I am not however expected to form an opinion about the quality and accuracy of revenue projections at this stage.

IBP Comment: Per OBI methodology, IBP editors chose answer "a."

There have been numerous reports of problems in the procurement process. Amongst those dominating the media this year were those of the public broadcaster SABC cited in this Mail & Guardian Article dated 02 July 2009 by Glynnis Underhill (available online at: <http://www.mg.co.za/article/2009-07-02-sabc-crisis-there-are-political-commercial-forces-at-play>) and the Correctional Services where Adrian Basson reported in the mail & Guardian dated 30th January 2009 (available online at <http://www.mg.co.za/article/2009-01-30-popcrubalfour-must-resign>) that fraud and corruption was rife in the department's procurement system.

Comment:

The procurement system in South Africa has undergone numerous reforms, the thrust of which was to ensure compliance with minimum norms and standards, competitive procedure and a supply chain management function against a backdrop of preferential procurement legislation and policies. The latter requires that procurement in government be aligned to the Black Economic Empowerment policy. The recent of these initiatives are the under development preferential procurement regulations which are available online at: <http://www.treasury.gov.za/public%20comments/1-32489%2014-8%20Nat%20Treas.pdf>

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "a." I chose my answer because the enacted levels referred to in this question include in-year changes approved by the legislature and appear in these statements as the final appropriation. I admit however that this is an anomaly as it becomes difficult to readily assess the changes in the budget allocations without the initial appropriation being recorded beside the final appropriation.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments and documents, IBP editors chose answer "a."

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." Reporting on performance is a major weakness. For instance, even the Government Programme of Action or its equivalents in departments are often not updated or have an incomplete list of indicators, or bear little resemblance to budget allocations. As a result, in some areas there is no way to track performance within a fiscal year. But, in other areas (e.g. public works) there is strong and well-developed reporting system for non-financial data.

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "a." I chose my answer because using again the example of the Department of Housing report, extensive discussions are presented on the number of units delivered as well as the effect movements in for instance, inflation, fuel and oil prices, land and labour costs had on the overall property prices and rate of delivery.

IBP Comment: Per OBI methodology, IBP editors chose answer "a."

Departmental year-end reports also capture service delivery outputs against pre-set measurable performance indicators. See for instance page 95 of the Department of Housing Annual Report, where instead of 1100 Social Rental Housing Units, the Department delivered 1200 units.

Researcher Response to this Question was "a"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." The performance indicators of departments are often poorly specified and not measurable. Sometimes percentages are used without any baseline information. Source: As an example, see the annual report of Department of Housing as referred to above.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "b." To the credit of many departments, they provide lots of reliable and honest information. However, in other cases, failures are hidden and no clear explanations provided

Government Comment: Government did not dispute researcher's answer.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "a." I chose my answer because there are explanations given about differences in the pre-set indicators. As discussed earlier, there are issues around the quality and comprehensiveness of indicators for some departments where the use of percentages as compared to absolute units is used, for instance. In some cases, it is clear that using the alternative indicator will advance the measurement of programme performance more than subjective percentage-based indicators would, yet departments opt for the latter indicator.

IBP Comment: Per OBI methodology, IBP editors chose answer "a."

109. Does the year-end report explain the difference between the enacted level of funds intended to benefit directly the country's most impoverished populations and the actual outcome?

- a. Yes, an extensive explanation of the differences is presented, including both a narrative discussion and quantitative estimates.
- b. Yes, an explanation is presented, highlighting key differences, but some details are excluded.
- c. Yes, some explanation is presented, but it lacks important details.
- d. No, an explanation is not presented, or such a report is not released.
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:

The explanations are given in explicit targeting criteria for social programmes. The various programmes under the Department of Housing target different groups based on income as a measure of poverty levels. At the end of the day, it is known who amongst the population benefit from social housing programmes. There are however programmes like engineering infrastructure that benefit all people in a locality whose benefit incidence is not well captured. Similarly an analysis of who benefits from tenders for housing provision to the poor is usually missing.

Comment:

The Department of Housing Annual Report for 2007/08 is available online at: <http://www.housing.gov.za/> as an exemplar.

Researcher Response to this Question was "b"

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." The problem of under-spending or indeed over-spending is a major issue for some government programmes, and there has been little explanation as to why this has occurred. IBP staff should note that the spending variance from the budget in SA is extremely small – less than 0,5% according to Treasury. However, the question here is whether there has been an adequate explanation, and on both over- and under-spending there has not been a recent explanation as to why this occurs. So even simple reporting of why budget outcomes have been achieved is not adequately captured. This must mean that distributional impacts of spending are even more difficult to explain.

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "a." Expenditure information is provided at the program, sub-program and economic classification level where amounts appropriated and spend on the poor can be identified. Also the Indicators and targets as well as the service delivery focus in the ENE will have this kind of information. Nonetheless, it is important to note that there is no annual consolidated reporting on amounts spent on the poor.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should remain as I indicated in the questionnaire: "b." I would say this is work in progress and yes attempts are being made to move in this direction.

The website of the Auditor General has provisions for comments and suggestions.

Comment:

Recommendations made to parliament representing the public, and comments on all reports to parliament are taken into account. The office also holds stakeholder consultations with stakeholders at national, provincial and municipal level. These consultations are held across the provinces and are reported in the Auditor General's Annual Report for 2008/09 available online at:

121. Does the executive make available to the public a report on what steps it has taken to address audit recommendations or findings that indicate a need for remedial action?

- a. Yes, the executive reports publicly on what steps it has taken to address audit findings.
- b. Yes, the executive reports publicly on most audit findings.
- c. Yes, the executive reports publicly on some audit findings.
- d. No, the executive does not report on steps it has taken to address audit findings.
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

There is no evidence that such a report exists.

Comment:

Consultation with National Treasury officials confirmed that such a report was not produced, at least by the executive. Telephone interview with a Mr. Thando Ngozo of National Treasury (Budget Office) conducted on September 16, 2009.

Researcher Response to this Question was "d"

Peer Reviewer One Comment: A more appropriate response to this question may be "c." Some departments do comment in Annual Reports on remedial action taken, but as far as we are concerned, this is not regulated and/or required by law.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Government Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be "c." In the Annual Reports for each department, the Accounting Officers indicate how the issues raised by the AG have been or will be addressed. Although this does not always include all the issues but some issues are addressed. Hence "c" would be the appropriate answer, as the Annual Report is available to the public.

Researcher Response: I suggest the answer should be changed to "c." I chose my answer because it is true that some departments do report on actions they have taken to address the Auditor General's recommendation; however this remains at the discretion of the department concerned and the absence of a centrally coordinated tracking mechanism remains worrisome.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments, IBP editors chose answer "c."

122. Does either the Supreme Audit Institution or the legislature release to the public a report that tracks actions taken by the executive to address audit recommendations?

- a. Yes, a comprehensive report is released regularly that tracks actions taken by the executive to address audit recommendations.
- b. Yes, a report is released, covering key audit recommendations, but some details are excluded.
- c. Yes, a report is released, but it lacks important details.
- d. No, a report is not produced or it is prepared for internal purposes only (please specify).
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

There is a lack of a robust monitoring mechanism and record of follow-up action by the Auditor General e.g. strengthening of controls, systems or procedures. In a meeting held on 23rd June 2009 to discuss the role of the Auditor General's office and the oversight function of SCOPA, the Auditor General made it clear that their role was to "point out irregularities and suggest remedies but that the taking of action was the primary responsibility of the Accounting Officer of each entity."
