Section Two: The Executive’s Budget Proposal

Notes on abbreviations:
BY = budget year (year for which the budget proposals are being made)
BY+1 = one year beyond the budget year
BY-1 = one year before the budget year

Note 1: The Open Budget Survey research process was carried out over a 12-month period and the final version of the Open Budget Questionnaires reflect decisions made after multiple rounds of discussions between Survey researchers, peer reviewers, and the International Budget Partnership (IBP) (in several countries these decisions also considered comments received from governments). When peer reviewers or governments agreed with the answers provided by researchers, they often provided no comment. Thus for many questions, the section in the questionnaire that should contain peer reviewer comments is left blank. However, if the government did not provide any comments to a question (because it did not dispute the answer), the section within the questionnaire that is meant to reflect government comments specifies the answer that the government agreed with (by default).

Since the IBP continued its discussions with the researchers even after receiving peer reviewer and government comments, for some questions these discussions resulted in a mutual decision to change the answers, even if the peer reviewers and governments agreed with the original answer provided by the researcher. Such changes may have happened as a result of:

1. A more consistent application of the Survey methodology;
2. New information identified by the researcher or by IBP that had a bearing on the answer for a particular question; or
3. Decisions made to ensure cross-country comparability of answers.

For more information on these changes for any question please write to info@internationalbudget.org.

Departmental Annual Reports that detail spending plans are tabled with the Main Estimates. The number of outer years varies, depending on when the last spending review was carried out (this is the UK’s system for allocating resources over the medium-term, which takes place every 2 or 3 years and is periodic and not rolling). For example, the 2008 Annual Report of the Department for International Development included figures for the budget year plus two further years (Annex 2) as the Comprehensive Spending Review had been published in 2007, but the 2009 Annual Report only had figures for one year beyond the budget year (Chapter 5).

15. Does the executive’s budget or any supporting budget documentation show the impact of different macroeconomic assumptions (i.e., sensitivity analysis) on the budget (including expenditures, revenues, and debt)?

a. Yes, extensive information on the impact of macroeconomic assumptions on the budget is presented, including both a narrative discussion and quantitative estimates.

b. Yes, information is presented, highlighting the impact of the major macroeconomic assumptions, but some details are excluded.

c. Yes, some information is presented, but it lacks important details.

d. No, information on the impact of different macroeconomic assumptions on the budget is not presented.

e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:
There is no adequate analysis of the sensitivity of the forecasts to changes in their underlying assumptions, only a discussion of the level of uncertainty surrounding the forecasts (E.g. Budget 2009, EFSR p18). The chart with different surplus scenarios cited in previous years is also no longer presented, justifying a downgrade to a “d.”
http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/d/Budget2009/bud09_chapter2_514.pdf

There is, however, a mechanism to ensure or strengthen the integrity of the assumptions made in the budgets. Sections 156 and 157 of the Finance Act 1998 provide for the Comptroller and Auditor General to examine and report on conventions and assumptions underlying the Treasury’s fiscal projections that are submitted by the Treasury for examination.
Audit of Assumptions for Budget 2009, 22 April 2009:

Comment:

Researcher Response to this Question was “c”

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be “d.” The question asks about the sensitivity of forecasts to changes in the assumptions underlying the forecasts, whereas this is just a discussion of the level of uncertainty surrounding the forecast and an audit of the assumptions underlying the public finance forecasts. There is nothing about the sensitivity of the forecast to changes in the assumptions.

Researcher Response: We agree with Peer Reviewer Two, and have altered our response accordingly.

IBP Comment: Based on a review of comments, IBP editors chose answer “d.”

Comment:
Earmarked taxes have proven problematic in the UK, e.g. the Road Fund was set up in 1921 and financed by earmarked taxes, but frequently raided for general revenue and closed down in 1937. Sometimes, politicians make political promises that certain revenue increases will go towards certain expenditure, e.g. the Chancellor announced an increase in tobacco duties in Budget 2000 and linked this to increased health spending. This was verified with the Institute for Fiscal Studies.

The periodic nature of the UK's spending review system means that the number of outer years referred to in policy goals varies. Public Service Agreements (PSAs) are published periodically alongside Comprehensive Spending Reviews (CSR), which provide three-year medium term frameworks for departments. PSAs document the government's objectives and associated performance measures. The current (2007) PSAs/CSR set out the government's highest priority outcomes up until 2010/11.

Comment:
Researcher Response to this Question was “a”

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be “c.” The UK government did not present spending allocations for the 2011–12 budget year in 2009–10, but the Public Service Agreements sometimes involve setting out performance measures going beyond the end of the Spending Review period. For example, one of the targets for the Department of Transport was to increase the capacity of the rail network by 14.5% by 2013–14, despite the fact that their budget had not been set beyond 2010–11. See http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/d/pbr_csr07_psa5.pdf.

Researcher Response: If the question is taken literally, then “c” could be appropriate. However, this is a result of the periodic (rather than rolling) design of the UK's multi-year framework system, which means that in some years budgets cover multiple years, whereas in others they just cover one (i.e. in the outermost year of the framework).

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer “b” because it is correct that there is not always a multi-year budget perspective (two years beyond BY) presented. However, as peer reviewer two lines out, the (major) policy goals are presented and this justifies a good value.

Public Service Agreements (PSAs) are published periodically alongside Comprehensive Spending Reviews (CSR), which provide three-year medium term frameworks for departments. PSAs document the government's objectives and associated performance measures. The 2004 Public Service Agreement contained targets for each objective. Responding to criticism, and following a trend of reducing the number of targets imposed, the 2007 PSAs retained only a small number of centrally determined targets, and instead emphasized benchmarks and minimum standards:

The Intelligence Services Act 1994 establishes special oversight arrangements for intelligence matters. The Intelligence and Security Committee examines the expenditure, administration and policy of the intelligence agencies. Its cross-partisan membership of nine is appointed by the Prime Minister after consultation with the Leader of the Opposition. The Committee has access to highly classified material in preparing its reports, which presumably includes detailed descriptions of all expenditures. Since the process is secretive, the disclosed level of detail cannot be ascertained. The process is probably very transparent by international standards. The Committee is required to report annually to the Prime Minister on its work. These reports, after any deletions of sensitive material, are placed before Parliament and published at http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/intelligence/

Standing Order No. 48 of the House of Commons reserves the right to financial initiative for the Government. Parliament can cut existing items only. Formally, these are self-imposed constraints. In practice, Parliament no longer amends the budget. The last government defeat over estimates dates back to 1921. Nowadays, an amendment to the executive budget proposal would be considered a vote of no confidence and cause the fall of the government.

The reserve and the regular intervals with which supplementary estimates are tabled (see question 98 below) give the executive very substantial flexibility. Moreover, HM Treasury controls transfers and uses its discretion in approving them: “If the proposed reallocation is thought to be of so great a departure from the original estimate, then it will be brought before Parliament by means of a supplementary estimate” (Lienert 2004, p. 431). Revised Estimates may also be presented in the summer to adjust the Main Estimates before Parliament approves them. New Estimates may also be introduced in the course of the year. “Out-of-turn” Supplementary Estimates may be presented at any time in the year when Parliament is sitting. This only occurs in exceptional circumstances, where urgent additional provision is needed at short notice and where this cannot await a Normal Estimates round.

Executive flexibility during budget execution is substantial, but there are limits. The Exchequer and Audit Departments Act of 1866 allow the Treasury to withhold funds. Treasury uses discretion in reallocating funds, but if adjustments are deemed substantial, a Supplementary Estimate is tabled. Additional spending can be made before parliamentary approval from the Contingencies Fund, which is limited by the Contingencies Fund Act of 1974 to two percent of authorized supply expenditure of the previous year. In addition, a “vote on credit” can be used to obtain parliamentary approval for a lump sum for which the purpose can only be stated in general terms.

In general, Winter and Spring Supplementary Estimates are common, Summer Supplementary Estimates are less common, and Out-of-turn Supplementary Estimates are rare. During 2008-2009, there were Winter, Spring and Summer Supplementary Estimates, and the UK government’s interventions in the financial sector in the autumn of 2008 required the tabling of the “Out-of-Turn Supplementary Estimates 2008-09” (13 October 2008, HC 1061). During 2007-2008 and 2006-2007, there were Winter and Spring Supplementary Estimates.

All recent Supplementary Estimates are available here: http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/psr_estimates_supplementary.htm

99. In most years, how large are supplemental budget requests relative to the size of the original budget?

   a. Supplemental budgets are generally equal to 2 percent or less of the original budget.
   b. Supplemental budgets are generally equal to more than 2 percent, but less than 5 percent, of the original budget.
   c. Supplemental budget are generally equal to more than 5 percent, but less than 10 percent, of the original budget.
   d. Supplemental budget are generally equal to 10 percent or more of the original budget, or insufficient information is available to the public regarding the amount of supplemental budgets.
   e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:
For 2007-2008 the total supplementary request for resources was 5.2% of the original net resource requirement and the total supplementary request for cash was 3.8% of the original net cash requirement. For 2008-2009 the total supplementary request for resources was 10.1% of the original net resource requirement and the total supplementary request for cash was 21.6% of the original net cash requirement. For most years prior to 2008-2009, the difference has been between 3 and 5 percent of the original budget.
http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/psr_estimates_supplementary.htm

Comment:
Resources refer to gross resource requirement less operating appropriations in aid. Cash refers to resources, plus capital and less non-operating appropriations in aid and accruals to cash adjustments.

Peer Reviewer One Comment: I agree with the response, as even though the supplemental budget exceeds 10 percent of the original budget in years 2008-2009, 2003-2004 (9.38%), and 2002-03 (9.88%), for most of the years the wedge lies in the 3-5 percent range. It would be helpful, however, if question 99 were to be formulated in a more specific context. That is, how many years shall one consider in the consideration of the “most years?”

Peer Reviewer Two Comment:

Researcher Response: We agree with Peer Reviewer One – the question could be made more specific.
100. When does the legislature approve the expenditure of contingency funds or other funds for which no specific purpose was identified in the budget?

- a. Expenditures are approved before the funds are expended, or contingency funds or other funds with no specific purposes are not included in the budget.
- b. Expenditures are approved after the funds are expended, but before the end of the fiscal year.
- c. Expenditures are approved after the end of the fiscal year, for example in the next budget.
- d. Such expenditure takes place without legislative approval.
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:
There is a Contingency Fund, which may be used to finance urgent expenditure in anticipation of parliamentary approval. Total advances outstanding at any one time must not exceed 2 per cent of the previous year’s total cash supply provision. Advances are repaid when Parliament votes additional cash.

Information on the use of the contingency fund can be found on Section 5.B of the Supply Estimates Guidance Manual at http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/d/estimates_manual011007.pdf. Although paragraph 5.4 states that “no resources or cash may be utilized by a department on a service until Parliament has provided the necessary authorization,” paragraph 5.7 supports response “b.” By stating “Use of the Fund can only be considered where it would clearly be contrary to the public interest to delay expenditure until parliamentary approval has been obtained and where there are no reasonable grounds to doubt that Parliament is willing to approve any necessary enabling legislation, the increased net cash requirement and any associated resources.” However, as paragraph 5.5 makes clear “The limit is fixed at 2 per cent of the total of authorized Supply expenditure (i.e., the total of all authorized departmental net cash requirements) in the preceding financial year.”

In terms of the Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000, audited departmental accounts have to be submitted to Parliament by the end of January (section 6). Accounts may be tabled before the deadline, e.g. the Department for International Development published its audited Resource Accounts 2008-2009 (for the year ended 31 March 2009) in July 2009. These are tabled separately from the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper and the End of Year Fiscal Report. In that sense, there is no single “year-end report” but a series of different reports, and only the departmental accounts are audited.

This is not the focus of the End of Fiscal Year Report, which comments on deviations from the fiscal projections, which may of course have macroeconomic reasons. The Budget (Chapter B of the FSBR) discusses macroeconomic developments and updates Annex A of the Pre-Budget Report. This includes some comparison with prior estimates, but not comprehensively. b. The SAI employs designated staff, but the staffing levels are a cause of some constraints to the SAI in fulfilling its mandate.

Citation:
The SAI does employ designated staff for undertaking audits of government security sectors. For example, with reference to the Ministry of Defence, the National Audit Office has set up the UK NAO Defence Value for Money Team (VFM), which has as a goal “to better understand what drives the performance of major defence projects.” In one instance, it is made clear that the team has employed the services of IBM consultants to help them “develop a tool to aid departmental and industry teams in making a better informed choice of the contracting strategy MOT suited to the circumstances of the procurement.”
The VFM Team has also created collaborative relationships with a number of external agencies to assist them in their contracting practices, successful delivery of projects, etc. Examples can be found at:

Researcher Response to this Question was “a”

Peer Reviewer One Comment: I agree with the response.

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be “d.” The NAO does not appear to employ designated staff for undertaking audits of the security sector, although it does audit the Ministry of Defence and the Home Office and related bodies. See http://www.nao.org.uk/sectors/defence.aspx. The fact that designated staff is not employed, however, does not necessarily mean that the NAO does not adequately audit these areas.

Researcher Response: We agree with Peer Reviewer One, whose additional information supports our original conclusion. We have copied and pasted Peer Reviewer One’s comments into our response accordingly. Peer Reviewer Two’s conclusions are contradicted by our own conclusions and those of Peer Reviewer One.

IBP Comment: IBP editors chose answer “a” and agree with the researcher on the basis of the information provided (specific defence teams / knowledge).

119. Does the Supreme Audit Institution maintain formal mechanisms of communication with the public to receive complaints and suggestions to assist it in determining its audit program (that is, to identify the agencies, programs, or projects it will audit)?

- a. Yes, the SAI maintains mechanisms of communication with the public, and received more than 100 communications from the public during the past year.
- b. Yes, the SAI maintains mechanisms of communication with the public, and received less than 100 but more than ten communications from the public during the past year.
- c. Yes, the SAI maintains mechanisms of communication with the public but it receives very little (less than ten) or no information from the public on potential subjects for audit.
- d. No, the SAI does not maintain any formal mechanisms of communication with the public.
- e. Not applicable.

The National Audit Office (NAO) has a complete independence in determining its audit programme, which is in line with section 13.1 of INTOSAI’s Lima Declaration (in practice it consults the Public Account Committee). It is in my view a very bad idea to have public consultations on the audit program, which could seriously compromise the independence of the Supreme Audit Institution. However, the Comptroller and Auditor General, the Auditor General for Wales and the C&AG for Northern Ireland are prescribed persons under the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998, to whom external disclosures can be made relating to “the proper conduct of public business, fraud, value for money and corruption in relation to the provision of centrally-funded public services.” The NAO maintains a Whistleblowers Hotline for this purpose: http://www.nao.org.uk/contact_us/whistleblowers.aspx

According to NAO’s 2009 Annual Report, it “dealt with a wide range of inquiries, including over 700 items of correspondence from Members of Parliament and members of the public.”

- d. No, audit reports are not scrutinized.
- e. Not applicable/other (please comment).

Citation:
To scrutinize all audit reports would be impossible. The NAO audits about 450 accounts per year and also produces about 60 Value for Money audit reports. Each year around 40 to 50 reports – both value for money reports and reports on accounts of public bodies – are investigated further by the PAC. The committee procedure involves the questioning of relevant accounting officers in a public hearing. UK ex post financial scrutiny is very thorough, and very few countries reach the level of scrutiny achieved by the PAC in the House of Commons. The selection of reports that get a hearing is done very carefully, taking into account factors such as risks to the public finances and past performance. The UK should get the top score in this category, but the phrasing of the response categories does not permit this.

Comment:

Researcher Response to this Question was “b”

Peer Reviewer One Comment:

Peer Reviewer Two Comment: A more appropriate response to this question would be “c” since fewer than half of the reports of the NAO are scrutinized. However, I agree with the comments above that the UK ought to get the top score in this category, but technically this is the correct answer to the question.

Researcher Response: We disagree with Peer Reviewer Two, and think the answer should remain “b.” We acknowledge the comment, but answer “c” would seriously misrepresent the very high - exceptional by international standards - quality of audit scrutiny by the House of Commons' Public Accounts Committee. Answer “b” is a reasonable compromise. Also, it is true that the PAC scrutinizes most value for money reports.

IBP Comment: IBP editors agree with the researcher’s response and chose answer “b.”
